Opting to walk, bike, or use public transit reduces emissions. This improves air quality, which does less damage to children’s lungs and can reduce asthma attacks. More walking and cycling can also reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease and diabetes, and improve mental health.

What can I do?
- Walk, bike, carpool or use public transit where possible.
- Advocate for bike lanes and public transportation infrastructure in your community.