One Doctor’s Journey to Virginia Clinicians for Climate Action

Samantha Ahdoot, MD, FAAP
Chair, Cofounder
June 5, 2002
Chilling at Starbucks with my 2 month old

City of Boston extends the Heat Alert through Sunday, Aug. 18, 2002

For Immediate Release
August 16, 2002
Released By:
Mayor's Office

For More Information Contact:
BPHC Communications; (617) 534-7148

BOSTON -- With the National Weather Service predicting temperatures reaching the 90's this weekend, Mayor Thomas M. Menino has extended the Heat Alert for the City of Boston through Sunday, August 18, 2002.

According to today's Boston Globe, if the heat wave lasts through the weekend, it will be only the fourth time since 1872 that Boston has experienced such a prolonged period of hot weather. The designation of a Heat Alert means that extra city services are added to help protect those most affected by the hot, humid weather. Those services include:

- The opening of cooling sites where people can go for air-conditioned relief;
- Nominal fees for the use of city pools are waived for Boston residents, and two outdoor pools; the Mirabella Pool, in the North End, and the Clougherty Pool, in Charlestown will be open until 8:00 p.m.;
- Additional EMS Ambulances will be activated.
Global Climate Change and Children's Health

Committee on Environmental Health
Isaac goes to Emergency Room
Faces of Climate Change
Sam and Sophia

Permission for photo use granted by parents of children
Faces of Climate Change
Matthew

Permission for photo use granted by parent of child
Faces of Climate Change
Noah
Becoming an Advocate

In Comfort Zone

OUT OF COMFORT ZONE!!
Virginia Clinicians for Climate Action

Education
Advocacy
Community Outreach

#climatechangeshealth